SAINT STEPHEN of HUNGARY

Saint Stephen and his father, the third duke to govern the Magyars, were baptized when Stephen was ten. In 997, when Stephen was 22, he succeeded his father and was soon at war in his effort to unite the Magyars. Having consolidated his position, Stephen obtained Pope Sylvester II’s approval for the proper establishment of the Church of Hungary. Stephen was crowned the first King of Hungary in 1001. Stephen ensured that Magyars were trained as priests, churches were built, and the great monastery of St. Martin, begun by his father, was finished. He instituted reforms in religion, civil law, and government. A deeply committed Christian, Stephen was very generous, often distributing alms. When his only son died in a hunting accident, Stephen’s life was made miserable by fights over the succession, He died in 1038, having united Hungary in politics and in religion, and was canonized in 1083. (from “Living with Christ”)

ST. BERNARD – Thursday, August 20

He was born in France about 1090 and grew to become a young man of charm, wit, learning, and eloquence. At the age of 22, with thirty-one companions including some of his brothers, he became a monk at a poverty-stricken monastery on the verge of collapse.

He realized he was too strict and improved the food which sometimes had been barley bread and boiled beech leaves. The monastery, Clairvaux, increased in size and numbered 700 monks at Bernard’s death in 1153, and 500 other houses.
